The Views of an Independent.

At the Independent meeting in Boston, Wednesday evening, the Rev. James Freeman Clarke was one of the principal speakers. His gentle is reiterated and emphasized the malicious and exploded charges that have been preferred against Mr. Blaine by the Cleveland press, and came to the conclusion that Mr. Blaine was unworthy to aspire to the high office of the Presidency. Regarding the charges of grave immorality against Gov. Cleveland that were first given to the public through the columns of Democratic papers then opposed to his nomination, Mr. Clarke declares in fact of the fact that the essential points of the same have been forgotten, that he does not believe Cleveland is the immoral man that these Democratic papers charged him to be, and one of the reasons for this belief is that his election as Mayor of Buffalo and Governor of New York completely upset the charges since preferred against him.

It strikes us, to say the least, that Mr. Clarke is hardly consistent in his conclusions. Here we find him denouncing Mr. Blaine as unworthy of the Presidency on charges of eight years' standing; charges with which the people of Maine were perfectly familiar when their representatives in the Legislature elected Mr. Blaine to the United States Senate; charges that the honored and honorable gentleman had seen continually paraded through the columns of the Democratic press when he called Mr. Blaine by the most endearing epithets; charges that were renewed in 1880 when he was the first choice of the Republicans of this country as a Presidential candidate, and again when he received the magnificent nomination at the hands of his fellow countrymen in 1884; charges that have been distorted and magnified at the hands of libelous pens, endless although this campaign of which Maine has already rendered its verdict, and the people from his own State to Ohio are now voting with each other in doing him honor, even the house of Cleveland giving him a splendid ovation in which one hundred thousand people participated, and charges that are today repudiated by our most distinguished and honored statesmen who are earnestly laboring for the election of Blaine and Logan.

Yet, in Mr. Clarke's estimation all this amounts to nothing while Gov. Cleveland's election as Mayor of the city of Buffalo and his incidental majority in the State of New York at a time when, owing to circumstances of a purely local nature, almost any man might have been elected as he was, furnish an abundant reason why the people of this country might consistently elevate him to the Presidency. We are inclined to think that Mr. Clarke will find that the people of this country are not quite up to his peculiar style of reasoning. Again Mr. Clarke says:

> It is sadly hard and narrow bigotry which would condemn a man forever for past misdeeds. The good sin which he repents of, and which neither he or his friends regret or excuse, is that he lived some ten years ago, with a widow as his wife, without being married to her. This was an offence which no one will defend, but he has grievously suffered for it, and shown his repentance in the truest way, by a change of life, and by doing good and useful work "meet for repentance." Can," you may say, "will you reward a man with the Presidency who has committed this offence against social morality?" No; public office is not a reward, but a duty.

The difference between Mr. Blaine and Cleveland, as candidates, is not merely that the offences of one belong to private life, and of the other to public affairs, though that distinction is important, but chiefly this—that the offence of Mr. Cleveland is not disguised, nor excused, nor defended, but that of Mr. Blaine is denied, or, excused, or defended. The great harm to morality does not consist so much from the wrong action as from its being defended, palliated and called right.

What are we to understand by this? That Mr. Blaine's alleged "unfitness" for the Presidency rests in the fact that, unlike Gov. Cleveland, who confesses the truth of the charges against him and cries "peccavi," Mr. Blaine, like any other honorable gentleman, brands the infamous attack upon his integrity as base falsehood and produces the absolute proof of their falsity, proof so convincing that in direct accordance with Mr. Clarke's own proclamation above, he has been fully accepted by the people of this country? Another reason why Mr. Clarke thinks that Gov. Cleveland is worthy of his support is that the Hon. Sherman S. Rogers, the Republican Independent leader of Buffalo, helped elect him Mayor of that city, but Mr. Clarke carefully refrains from any mention of the fact that Mr. Rogers is today an advocate of the election of Blaine and Logan. Mr. Clarke says that he shall support Gov. Cleveland and yet, retain his allegiance to the Republican party, on the ground, we presume, that Gov. Cleveland is superior to his party. Mr. Rogers says: "My friends, do not deceive yourselves. Gov. Cleveland is as he is elsewhere careful to inform you, a Democrat. You will always find him with his party." Mr. Clarke also bases great importance on the report of the gentleman, who on being sent to Buffalo to investigate the charges against Gov. Cleveland, by the Independent, pronounced them without "foundation," but he neglects to inform his hearers that on this very report the Independent, which had up to that time supported Gov. Cleveland, abandoned his candidacy in the following emphatic terms:

> We published last week, in our correspondence columns, a communication from Dr. Kinsley Twining, one of our editorial staff, giving the result of his investigation in regard to the Cleveland scandal. The grave and serious part of this scandal, which he declares that he found to be true, is that which implies personal impurity in Mr. Cleveland in the specific instance that has come to the knowledge of the public. We cannot, in view of all the facts, resist the conclusion that this part of the scandal is true; and this is quite enough to determine our course.

The damaging charge came upon us wholly unexpected, and with the full and stunning force of a thunder bolt out of the Clear Sky.

> We utterly refuse to accept low standard of character. We repudiate with contempt the doctrine that a "public man's private life is not to be inquired into. Dr. Twining's investigation went on the recognition of this principle.

On this subject, as it now stands we will not be slow to give advice. The conditions have wholly changed since the Independent Conference. Then we were ready with all fond enthusiasm to support the tried, and as we then believed, honest reformer, Grover Cleveland. Now, without one word in derogation of his record as Governor of the State, found certainly wiped out by the discovery of the facts alleged and not met by facts.

We hence desire to have all our readers plainly understand, once for all, that whatever has been said in the editorial columns of the Independent favorable to the election of Governor Cleveland, was said prior to the recent sickening disclosures in regard to his private character, which have justly shocked the purest sense of fair play and right-minded people. The attempt now to force such a candidate upon the people, would, in our opinion, disgrace the party which nominated him, and the whole Nation, to be elected.

An editorial in the Cleveland at Boston on the self confessed charge against Gov. Cleveland which Mr. Clarke thinks has been explained by years of repentance we find the following:

> The nation now, advocated by some of the secular papers that the iniquities and social crimes of a candidate for the Chief Magistracy in the gift of the Nation ought not to keep virtuous and Christian men from voting for him, deserve to be pilloried and exposed to the indignation of a righteous public sentiment.

How many who do more of a Christian than a politician must feel that it would be an unreasonable shame to send to the White House a man who is guilty of the very immorality which to-day is admitted that anything else striking a death blow at the family, disrupting society, sapping the virtue of our young men, and ruining the Nation.

> It would be indecent in the highest in a Christian Nation and work infinite mischief as a successful bad example, to adorn the throne of a self-confessed libertine with the crown of womanhood with the crown of Chief Magistracy.

In a recent letter published in the Wind from the Rev. Cyrus Hamlin who has no knowledge of the Democratic candidate that is not shared by Mr. Clarke in common with the public generally, the gentleman gave four reasons why he could not conscientiously support Gov. Cleveland, the first of which was "on account of his immoral life." Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, in a public letter declares that if Gov. Cleveland be the man he is represented and the persons to be no respectable [illegible] he is wholly unfit to be the standard bearer of the American people.

When Mr. Clarke in his recent speech touched the subject of Gov. Cleveland's private character, he said:

> I have been asked again and again how as a minister of the Gospel, can you support an immoral, unprincipled man as President—a man who is stained with debauchery and vice? I never could support such a man as that for President. No such man shall ever have my vote for no matter what his other qualities might be he never could fulfill his public duties aright." The only logical conclusion left the intelligent and confident voters is that Gov. Cleveland is just the kind of a man which Mr. Clarke says he cannot support.

It Roveles in Falsehood.

Under the heading of "Another Democratic Outrage," the Wind Thursday morning exposed the systematic falsifying of the latest Democratic statement relative to Mr. Blaine's connection with the Hocking Valley transaction, but the editor of the Commercial who seems to be either incapable of recognizing the truth when he reads it, or so fond of revelling in falsehood that he carefully guards his columns against an occasional truthful remark, persists in the declaration that Mr. Blaine was "for two years an owner of property in the Hocking Valley. The letter which we published from Mr. Lee, the principal in the transaction, completely refutes this statement. Mr. Blaine in Mr. Lee's receipt also certified for a share of the Hope Furnace Tract Association, with the explicit understanding that he transfer should be regarded as a trust at the expiration of two years. Mr. Blaine should decide not to hold the same. He did so decide and the transaction was regarded as a farce by the principals. Mr. Lee, who is at the over his own signature, therefore substantiating Mr. Blaine's statement that he never had been an owner in these lands. In Mr. Lee's letter he states: "The $50,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the Standard Coal and Iron Company delivered to Mr. Elkins by Mr. Brooks and receipted for by him on the 25th of May, 1882, as set forth in the statement of Brooks, were deposited by Mr. Brooks and myself as collateral security to secure the payment of the amount advanced or loaned to me by Mr. Blaine and for no other purpose, and so it held to-day." From this it seems that Mr. Brooks himself is the only man who is to interest is affected by this correspondence. He was perfectly familiar with the facts in the case, but in order to assist the Democratic cause of the Democracy he makes this false accusation against Mr. Blaine. The Lewiston Journal well says: "It is hinted to see how Mr. Brooks can derive from this scheme to defame Mr. Blaine, even as much satisfaction as to aid said uncle Ben Allen used to, in playing solitaire, and cheating himself."

> The knaves who have been slumbering Mr. Cleveland should be in Buffalo this evening, to observe the festivities planned upon the 'Honest Governor by his old friends and neighbors.—New York World, Oct. 2.

If, according to the World, a reception in his own home, the arrangements for which have required many weeks of persistent labor, is to be a complete indorsement of Gov. Cleveland's fitness for the Presidency, what is to be said of the indorsement of Mr. Blaine has received not only in his own city and State, but the magnificent and spontaneous receptions that have been accorded him on his journey to Ohio? Does not this remarkable enthusiasm on the part of the people furnish a complete answer to the malicious attack of the Cleveland press?

If the Commercial were to "put words into Mr. Boutelle's mouth" his speeches and remarks would be more sensible than they generally are.—Commercial.

This we presume is to be taken as a joke. At least the idea of a man giving away what he never possessed is very amusing. If the editor of Commercial has that fund of "sense" that the above would indicate it is a little remarkable that he has for all these years so persistently refrained from giving his readers any of the benefit of it.

Nailing Another Blaine Slander.

MR. BOY EMPHATICALLY DENIES THE STORY ATTRIBUTED TO HIM.

[By telegraph to the Tribune.]

DETROIT, Sept. 30, [1884].

Immediately upon the publication of the Blaine-Joy letter in the New York Herald, and its republication in Detroit by the Free Press and other Democratic papers, General R. A. Alger, the Republican candidate for governor of Michigan, telegraphed to Joy who is now in London, as follows:

DETROIT, Sept. 29, 1884.

Joy, care Brown, Shipley & Co., London:

Did Blaine offer to appoint committee to suit you if you took Little Rock bonds off his hands? Kurry Wood Beecher says you told him Blaine did. ALGER.

The following is Mr. Joy's reply:

LONDON, Sept. 30, 1884.

R. A. Alger, Detroit, Michigan:

Blaine never made me any offer to appoint committee to settle any matter or form, or for any consideration of any kind whatever. J. H. JOY.

Shall the Democracy be Dissolved?

[New York World.]

The Democratic party has lived long and has endured reverses and calamities from without and follies and plunders from within, such as would long since have destroyed any party whose principles were not immortal. Yet the great organization of the human race after its rise and while the Jefferson Convention of 1806, the Chicago Convention of 1864, and the Baltimore Convention of 1872 all failed to bring about, may now finally be accomplished by the election of Grover Cleveland.

The election of Grover Cleveland will necessarily shrink up the Democratic party, and the only hope of preserving its Continental organization lies in his defeat.

The last session of the House of Representatives struck a terrible blow at the democracy. It enabled the party into two distinct camps, hostile to each other, radically opposed to each other on a question of principle, and each inured both on fighting the other than on fighting the Republicans. We refer, of course, to the contest on a tariff for revenue only as against tariff imposing duties for the purpose of protecting enterprises not industry, not to create monopolies, but to diversify and foster American labor.

If Mr. Cleveland will be elected this contest would have to be fought out in the bosom of the Democratic party, with the Republicans looking on in the spectators or rendering aid and comfort to that side of the battle with which they might sympathize.

If the party has come into power the policy of the latest before chaos, and all sections of the party have been united to support it. Moreover, in every such case but one the elected President has had a term of sufficient intelligence and force to lead his party and keep it united. The exception to this rule is one that every American remembers. Under President Pierce the Democratic party became radically divided on the question of slavery, and the quarter covered by the shock of the divided result was the overthrow of the Democracy in 1860 and the civil war which followed. In the present crisis no such event is to be expected as the improbable event of Cleveland's election, but it is not the ill-solution of the party inevitable?

What are the fact-predictors which lead to this prediction? In New York, in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Indiana and Ohio those who hold to the Democracy are "protectionists," and they are laboring to elect Mr. Cleveland as one who [illegible] in the election after he is elected. So Mr. Cleveland has given Mr. Morrison's bill a "veto" to that effect. Does anybody suppose that Mr. Morrison, Mr. Barnum, William Mr. Randall or Samuel J. Randall could be brought to engage in the effort that they now put forth without assurances that they and their ideas should not be turned upon and stricken down by the President after his inauguration?

On the other hand, in Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin it is the free trade Democrats who are conducting the campaign, and it is in behalf of their policy of "tariff for revenue only" that the contest is waged. They are installed in their declaration that the Chicago platform is essentially a free trade platform; that Grover Cleveland is in favor of a tariff for revenue only, and that if his election should result in that sort of revenue reform which they have so long contended for will win a solid and enduring victory.

Now, suppose that Mr. Cleveland should be elected, it would, of course, be impossible for him to keep faithfully the conflicting pledges which each of the two factions under which he has received from him, and it would be impossible for him or for anybody else to reconcile the conflict between the Democratic free traders and the Democratic protectionists. The War would have to be fought out. It would be a short and bitter war, and after it was over the integrity of the Democratic organization would be gone. Who could then show it would be necessary?

The safety of the Democracy requires the defeat of Grover Cleveland.

Campaign Clippings.

Washington Dispatch to the Boston Journal.]

Joe's Devotion.

It was a favorite jest, upon old Farmer Collingwood's farm, to tell Joe Ellison Sissy's daughter, and Susy, when she heard the half-taunting joke, only smiled softly, and let their sweet meeting only gave Joe a kinder word or sweeter smile.

She was the orphaned daughter of a country clergyman, whose sole legacy to her had been the best education his own profound learning could obtain to give her. When she was but a little girl her mother died, and she and her father's housekeeper, scholar and companion until her nineteenth birthday, when the Rev. Stephen Coyle was likewise taken from the child to his long rest. The good people of the parish, knowing Susy's advantages for study, had put her at the head of the district school, and her old home being the parsonage, she had received her personal possessions and had taken up her abode at Farmer Collingwood's, to be loving for years.

"Granted," the school mi'ach.

It was a merry, happy farmer's household where Susy lived. Julie and Mollie Collingwood were strong-armed, blooming damsels, full of coquettish grace, and with loud voices and no-ve habits. Charlie and James, the sons were fine specimens of young farmers, and the old man and his wife were kind-hearted, homely country folks.

She had begun but a little time in her position's—her gentleness to the top-headed young sters of Brent-Hill, when rumors of the road to a school station a mile up the afternoon, the Lord calling and gentle affections, the heart calling and gentle affections, the heart calling and gentle affections, in one of the cottage windows of each before she had left the same sound.

"Why, Julie," she whispered pitifully.

For she knew by the sound that she was being hearen by a cruel jeerster. But on this afternoon, as she drew near the cottage, the door quickly flew open, and the pilot Brent-Hill bowling and speeding in fast and his intimates followed, out at the opening, while following him, a strong, brutal man, half drunk, dominated an impudent boy-like.

The man reeling and staggering held the whip over the cowering, shrinking child, but when it fell Susy saw not Joe her Silas, who bent over him, one arm raised in defiance, but a wretch, whose ugliness in half-drunk and sweet Susy's slender arms and shoulders.

"Oh, dear pardon, madam," he said, "I did not see you was in the way."

"How can you?" she cried, her pale cheeks crimson with womanly indignation—"how can you, a strong man, strike a poor trembling boy like that? Why, with all the idiotic fiend tipped for profit don't to any man who was not a tyrant coward?"

"Well, of course, that's pretty strong, as I the man. "Don't I feed and lodge him for what he does, and don't I have a right to beat him if he does everything wrong? If don't crumble on, he don't."

"Don't keep him, then."

"I guess you're right. Won't have him may go to the nasch'est, but don't come here again."

"The good people at the farm looked after the pitiful when Susy appeared, followed by the stooping, limping figure of the village idiot. But the farmer broke into hearty laughter when she told of her interference, and begged a shelter for the boy.

"Stay here? Of course he can stay here," he said. "We'll find something for the poor beggar to do. But to think of your speaking up to Bob Carter, after the fashion. That's giving her a new name to him. Susy, you're a trump, and I'll back you against the world."

So, after
